The Berkshire Writing Workshop

The 2012 Berkshire Writing Workshop invites published and aspiring adult writers to join in our inaugural summer session from July 8 to July 13, 2012. Located on the bucolic campus of Bard College at Simon’s Rock in Great Barrington, MA, the program features five days of intensive writing workshops in fiction and memoir, with a focus on creating new work. Under the guidance of our dedicated instructors, writers should expect one of the most productive writing weeks of their lives.

When not in workshop or writing, you will discover what makes the Berkshires a legendary summer retreat, and why Smithsonian Magazine recently named Great Barrington the #1 Small Town in America. With music at nearby Tanglewood, and world-class theater and dance — not to mention fantastic restaurants, swimming holes, golf courses, and antique stores — you are sure to run out of time long before you run out of enticing ways to spend it.

This summer, we will offer two workshops, both focused on creating new work: Fiction with Brendan Mathews, and Memoir with Alison Lobron. Each workshop is limited to twelve students, so we encourage early registration.

Visit www.simons-rock.edu for more information.