Hints To Vacation Bound Motorists

Many vacation-bound motorists will be traveling one or more of the country’s newer super highways for the first time this summer. These uninitiated drivers will soon discover the thrill of covering long distances in a short time at sustained high speeds. But many of them will also discover a deadly driving hazard that has already claimed a number of lives. It’s called “highway hypnosis.”

According to the Institute for Safety Living, this is a comparatively new driving menace and is of a sort “asleep” deep induced by the monotony of traveling long, level ribbons of roadway where the driver has little to do but stare straight ahead while his car eats up the miles. The swish of passing cars and the steady hum of the motor complete the process of drugging the senses, to a point where it is often difficult for the driver to meet a sudden emergency.

A study of accidents on express highways shows that many drivers crash into the rear of other vehicles, run off the roadway, or crash into bridge abutments and guard rails for no outwardly apparent reason. In many such cases, however, it is easy to establish that the hypnosis factor has been at work.

The institute offers the following suggestions for safer highway travel:

- Do not fall into the habit of following the car ahead blindly. Be prepared for a sudden stop or a change of pace.
- Change your rate of speed frequently. This helps to prevent the drowsiness that can bring about the beginning of “highway sleep,” and aids in releasing physical tension.
- Take a short rest stop every fifty miles or so. Coffee, a light snack, or a brisk stretch and stroll will help to ward off driving hypnosis and fatigue.
- Keep plenty of fresh air circulating through the car.

If your mind becomes sluggish or if you turn red on the car radio or converse with fellow passengers, however, never permit your attention to wander from the serious business of driving.

Generally, there are fewer traffic regulation signs and control devices on fast highways but the ones you do encounter should be obeyed to the letter.

Be prepared to act quickly in any driving emergency. Remember that the faster traffic tempo of super highways may allow you only seconds in which to avert a tragedy.

Finally, when you leave the super highway, slow down immediately to the speed that is safe for the type of roadway on which you then find yourself. Driving hypnosis may delay your recognition that highway conditions have changed.

July is Picnic Month
by Betty Jarangow

The little town of Stamford was born March 6, 1735. It was the second grant of land in Essex County. At that time, the Governor of New Hampshire at that time, in Bennington. The county was divided into Connecticut River and New York State was originally called "No Man's Land", but since, is known as Vermont. This town was named Stamford after Stamford, England, and was granted to Ebenezer Cook and fifty-two other proprietors who were the signers of the first Charter. Some of them had invested in the rich land with the hope of re-selling it at a nice profit. However, the French and Indian War along the frontier halted the great interest in land speculation. For ten years there was little or no settlement made in this small town so close to the Province of Massachusetts Bay. Then in 1763 Stamford was chartered by New Hampshire under the name of New Stamford, but twenty years later on March 31, 1783 the town voted to drop the "New" and return to the original name of Stamford.

Many of the first settlers came from the surrounding areas of Massachusetts and Connecticut, and what is now an unhampered spot became a farming community.

At present, plans are being launched for an Old Home Day celebration for July 3. This program will include the following: an address by Ralph J. Flanders, U. S. Senator from Vermont; historical remarks by Dr. W. Peach, President of the Vermont Historical Society; antique exhibits; a square dance; a chicken barbecue and many other high spots. Stamford invites her neighbors to pay her a visit and join her in celebrating this special birthday.

LOG STAFF ENJOYS PICNIC

June 26, 1953

SPRAGUE ELECTRIC LOG

Everyone was restless all day that fateful day of June. There was an undercurrent of excitement building throughout the plant.

And then at 5:00 p.m., it was here. It was time! Work was left behind when all the LOG reporters and staff members set off for Taconic Park—the location of the first LOG picnic.

Apparatus had been whetted for weeks in advance, and diets were forgotten for this memorable event. Pete Mancuso had not eaten for three days. He certainly took advantage of the hot dogs, hamburgers, fresh corn on the cob, potato salad, pickles, olives, celery, watermelons and pastries, which were washed down by coffee.

The Joe Dimaggio and Ted Williams had a workout on the diamond, while the honk-shoe players tossed ringer around the poles. Mary Cantoni overworked herself on the diamond with the results—a fall and ripped shorts. A few deck hands matched wits and had a fine card game. Everyone was left to do as he pleased. Some took walks, others sat and chatted while still others took part in sports.

At twilight, attention was drawn toward the pavillion where dancing in all forms was enjoyed by everyone. One of the highlights was the fancy high stepping of Jack Washburn.

A large group turned out for this affair and the guests included William J. Nolan, Robert C. Sprague, Robert C. Sprague, Jr., William G. Phelps, and John D. Washburn.

What's a picnic without a game of softball? Marg Greene, Johnny Gallego, Mary Cantoni and Carmela Mancuso, at bat, enjoyed this game best of all.

Two More Immortals

The Baseball Writers' Association of America picked two more mortals, No. 63 and No. 64, for immortality in Baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y. "The men and their claims to fame:

Hit: A shoe bag tucked on the back of a closet door during the winter is a wonderful place for youngsters to keep their caps, mittens, and scarves where they can always find them.

Harry Symonski, 49, hard-hitting outfielder, lifetime average: .334, whose famed foot-in-the-backer batting stance was the terror of American and National League pitchers for 20 years (1924-44). As a Philadelphia outfielder in the heyday of Connie Mack's Athletics, Simmons hit over 300 for nine straight seasons, won the American League batting title in 1930 (.381) and 1931 (.390).

J. Nolan, Robert C. Sprague, Jr., Raymond Shattard, Jr., and John Davis, former workers in F.P. Assembly, recently spent a 20-day leave at home. His mother, Jerry, works in Metal Clad Department. She certainly was happy to have him at home.

Needing 75%, of the 264 ballots, each listing ten players, cast by the baseball writers, Dean made the grade with 209, Simmons with 199. Just missing for the second year in a row, by seven votes: New York Giant First Baseman Bill Terry, the last National League to hit over .400, lifetime average: .341, later a pennant-winning manager, who made no bones about his dislike for baseball writers. Eligible for the first time, and finishing eighth in the balloting (117 votes): New York Yankee Outfielder Joe DiMaggio.

Raymond Shattard, Jr., who formerly worked in F.P. Assembly, recently spent a 20-day leave at home. His mother, Jerry, works in Metal Clad Department. She certainly was happy to have him at home.

Hint:

While the average home can't be run as strictly as a hospital, when there's illness in the family any household can observe the basic cleanliness rules, such as washing hands after touching anything in the patient's room, and especially before meals. Even a simple illness like the common cold should be taken seriously and not allowed to infect other members of the family. With your faith in soap and water, and you'll raise the standard of your family's health.

"THE ROCK"

Here in the East Coast Sea
There are five thousand men and me
We work and sleep and think of home
e
We're in the Land that God forgot
Here on this Island, so far away
There is not a thing that looks as nice
As the things we dream of tonight
Back at home so far away
Yes we're in the Land that God forgot

The Rock

Now when the Rock comes to St. Peter will surely yell
"Let them in they have been on strike a while"
They have served their time in Hell
We have been in the Land that God forgot

The Sprague Electric Softball team, after winning four in a row, tumbled before the Rohane Oil Company in the crucial game. A win in this game would have given the Electrics the lead. Now the team is tied for first place with Rohane Oil and Holy Name.

It was a close game for four innings, and then they flew by their steady barrage of hits to score ten times. It must be said that the Electrics played every session ball for the big game and did not deserve to win. We must give credit where it is due and the Rohane Oil team is to be congratulated in league. The score was 10-2.

Even though Guido Libardoni, the Sprague Electric pitcher, was pounded hard, it must be said that his team mates were extremely shoddy on the field.

We hope they take a new lease on life and play the kind of ball we know that they can play. Sometimes a licking is good for a team that becomes careless in the game.
